On December 3, 2024, students from various schools visited the Garacharma campus to explore the Technology Exposition and Demonstrations. They visited several facilities, including the Ornamental Fish Unit, Fish Pond, Fisheries Museum, Integrated Farming System, Nakshatra Garden, Livestock Farm, Pig Shed, Butterfly Museum, Microplots, Medicinal Garden, Horticulture Plant Propagation Unit, Central Instrumentation Facility, and Library, where they interacted with scientists.

Valedictory function was held on December 3rd. Dr. Sharath Yeligar, Organizing Secretary of the program, commenced the proceedings by welcoming the Chief Guest and the school and college students who participated and excelled in various competitions. Shri D. Karunakaran, Scientist and Nodal Officer, provided a concise overview of the events.

Chief Guest, Dr. Lal Ji Singh, Additional Director Scientist-F and Regional Head of the Botanical Survey of India, underscored the crucial role of agriculture in the advancement of India. He spoke to students, educators, and researchers about the importance of agriculture in the Indian economy, asserting, "India is fundamentally an agricultural nation, with 80% of its population relying on rural agriculture either directly or indirectly. It is essential to engage future generations in agriculture through initiatives like Agricultural Education Day." Dr. Singh highlighted the necessity for technology-driven innovations to improve agricultural productivity and promote sustainability.

Dr. E.B. Chakurkar, Director of ICAR-CIARI, addressed the students, encouraging students to explore the extensive opportunities available in agriculture, which includes 65 disciplines offered by ICAR. He motivated them to consider fulfilling careers in this field and invited teachers to bring their students to CIARI, describing the experience as both enriching and enjoyable. He emphasized that such visits could ignite a greater interest in agriculture among young individuals. At the end, Dr. Harshang T. Kumar presented vote of thanks, Smt. Asma Bibi, Senior Technical Assistant coordinated the overall conduct of the programme along with Shri. Alex Praveen Barla, Senior Technical Assistant, Smt. Nazneen Khan, Young
